Dewey and Loveny Class met an Indian Lady called Daya. She taught us about religion and the culture in India. We then discussed the food that she likes to eat. Daya was dressed in beautiful traditional clothing, including the most wonderful jewellery. There are eleven Guru's, we were told the story of Guru Nanak and the five beloved ones.

Social Emotional Mental Health: Emotional Wellbeing

- Playing outside There is building research showing the need for children to spend quality time outside. Giving children time to run, play, discover and interact with others is key to supporting emotional and social wellbeing.
- Sensory play Giving children opportunity to learn and play using all their senses supports brain development and solidifies their learning whilst building their self-confidence and emotional wellbeing.
- Using emotional language Children need help in understanding their feeling and emotions. The regular and repeated use of emotional language allows children to identify their feeling and emotions with the correct language; thereby being able to identify emotions and feeling in others.
- Stillness and calm Modern family and school lives are very busy, we need time to stop, experience stillness and reflect. This time allows all of us time to process the jumble of information and make sense of the world. If we can make sense of what is happening we become calmer and become more emotionally stable.
- Our own wellbeing If we are going to be supporting children we need to make sure our own emotional welling being is supported. We need to ensure we are eating well; exercising, sleeping well and doing things that make us happy.
